

DRUMMER BOY HERO IS MARCHING TODAY

Col. John L. Clem, Who Won His
Laurels at Chickamauga,
Enlisted When Ten.

Among the veterans of the civil war in the Capital marching in today's memorial pageant with sorrowful interest and recalling through the mist of time the stirring days of Chickamauga, Chattanooga, Atlanta, and Nashville, who he gained renown as "The Drummer Boy of Chickamauga," is Col. John L. Clem, of the quarter-master's corps in the War Department, who is the only veteran of the great conflict at present on the active list of the United States army.

Colonel Clem was transferred a few months ago from Chicago, where he was acting chief quartermaster in the Department of the Lakes, to army headquarters at Washington, although sixty-three years old, Colonel Clem does not look it. He is ruggedly stout with a warm, healthy glow on his cheeks, and exhibits all the activity of a man twenty years younger. Recently he was given a reception by the members of the Kit Carson Post, G. A. R., and many comrades extended their good wishes to "Little Johnny Clem, the Drummer Boy of Chickamauga."

Drum Smashed, Used Musket.
Colonel Clem was ten years old when he enlisted, in April, 1861, and, as some one said, "might easily have been placed within a regulation drum." He at first offered his services to the 12th Ohio, but was refused on account of his size and tender years.

He afterwards was allowed to accompany the Twenty-second Michigan Regiment, owing to his determination to follow the fortunes of his country, but was not mustered in on account of his extreme youth. Soon he was beating the "long roll" in front of Shiloh, and his soldierly spirit so won the admiration of the officers of the regiment that he was enlisted at Covington, Ky., May 1, 1862.

At Shiloh his drum was smashed to pieces by a bursting shell, and from this time he was called "Johnny Shiloh," until, at the battle of Chickamauga, having just passed his twentieth year, he dropped his drum, and, in the thickest of the fighting, picked up a musket and fought away at the enemy like his comrades.

Shot Confederate Colonel.
During the battle of Chickamauga Clem received three balls through his cap and shot a Confederate colonel, which statements have been fully confirmed. He was made sergeant by General Rosecrans for heroic conduct on the field of battle, and attached to the headquarters of the Army of the Cumberland, and a daughter of former Chief Justice Chase presented him with a silver medal.

He followed the fortunes of the Army of the Cumberland during the march to the sea and was honorably mustered out at the close of the war. He was appointed second lieutenant, United States Infantry, by President Grant in 1871, and has gradually risen through the various grades until he is colonel and assistant quartermaster general at the War Department.

Declined Invitations
So He Could Stay Here
One of the best known and most highly respected members of the G. A. R. in the United States, Corporal James L. Clem, registrar of wills of the District of Columbia, declined a dozen invitations to speak at various gatherings today in order that he might attend the memorial exercises at Arlington. Today is the second time he has observed Memorial Day at the national cemetery, the other time being in 1897, when he delivered the principal address.

"I wanted to be among my comrades and honor the dead rather than do the talking this year," explained Corporal Clem.

In the second battle of Bull Run, on August 30, 1862, Corporal Clem was wounded and both of his legs were amputated on the field under fire. Despite this affliction Corporal Clem has fought valiantly in the battle of life and has held many responsible public positions and has reared a family of whom he is justly proud. He has four children, including James A. Tanner, a prominent Philadelphia lawyer, and Capt. S. W. Tanner, of the Seventeenth Infantry.

Twice Corporal Clem was commander of the Department of New York of the G. A. R., and while occupying that office was the moving spirit in the movement to establish the Soldiers' Home at Bath, N. Y., and the cornerstone of the institution. He was elected commander-in-chief of the G. A. R. in 1895.

President Roosevelt appointed Corporal Clem registrar of wills of the District in 1894, and President Taft continued him in office. As a further recognition of his ability and faithful service President Wilson recently decided that there should be no change in the office.

Young Spends Day
With J. L. Davenport
John R. Young, clerk of the District Supreme Court, is spending today with James L. Davenport, until a week ago Commissioner of Penitentiaries, and several other veterans at Mr. Davenport's home at Falls Church, Va. He has observed Memorial Day this way for several years, talking over old times with his comrades of a half a century ago.

Although Mr. Young was enlisted as a sharpshooter, being a private in the First Battalion of Tates Sharpshooters, afterward the Sixty-fourth Illinois, he declares he never shot a man in his life—and is glad of it. He also asserts that he was not wounded himself during his service.

When a young man Mr. Young was editor of a country newspaper at Wilmington, Ill. He joined the regiment of sharpshooters named for Governor Yates of Illinois, and after serving about a year entered the pay department, where he remained until 1871, coming to Washington soon afterward. He has been a clerk of the District Supreme Court since 1875.

BOY SCOUTS HELP IN DECORATING GRAVES

Eighty-Three Assist in Services at the Arlington National Cemetery Today.

Eighty-three Boy Scouts with complete equipment are today assisting in decorating the graves of civil war veterans at Arlington National Cemetery. The boys were requested by Department Commander McKee to assist the women of the auxiliary organizations in this work.

This is the first time assistance has ever been asked from an organization outside of the order, and marks, it is said, the beginning of a new order of affairs, "when the younger men will take over the glorious heritage left by the stars."

There are ten boys from Troop 27, eight from Troop 37, twenty-five from Troop 29, ten from Troop 19, ten from Troop 37, ten from Troop 19, ten from Troop 37.

Each boy wears a special badge entitling him to admission to all parts of the cemetery, and authorizing him to collect and carry flowers, flags, and other paraphernalia required in the decoration of the graves. The badges are of red silk, with the inscription "Memorial Day, 1913, Boy Scout." The boys are expected to decorate 23,000 graves, it is said.

The party left the city early this morning in special cars and reported to Department Commander McKee at the cemetery at 10 o'clock. They were given luncheon on the grounds and continued their work under the auspices of the Woman's Relief Corps, the Women of the G. A. R., and Daughters of Veterans.

Special Services.

Besides the decoration of the graves and the services at Arlington by the G. A. R., members of Barry Garrison, Army and Navy Union, will conduct special services at the graves of several of the prominent army and navy officers buried there. These special services will not take place until after the close of the G. A. R. ceremonies.

With three brothers General Whitaker enlisted at Lincoln's first call in the first company and regiment organized in Connecticut, from which he was mustered out with the rank of corporal July 31, 1861. Enlisting in Connecticut squadron of the Second New York Cavalry he rose rapidly to a captaincy and was honorably discharged to enable him to accept a captain's commission in the First Connecticut Cavalry, in which he was promoted to major, lieutenant colonel and brevetted brigadier general.

He received a Congressional medal of honor for gallantry at the battle of Five Forks, Appomattox Station, Va., June 23, 1864, in having volunteered and buried there the bodies of the enemy's line of battle. He was selected by General Sheridan to capture the famous Confederate guerilla, whom he brought in a prisoner in February, 1865.

Is Appointed Postmaster.
General Whitaker won his star, which he wore when he saluted the President at the grand review in Washington in May, 1865, when only twenty-three years old. On that occasion he rode at the head of the column of the Army of the Potomac.

At the beginning of his first Administration President Grant appointed General Whitaker postmaster at Hartford, Conn. On leaving that office he came to Washington in 1872 and since has made this city his home.

The family of General Whitaker settled in Massachusetts in 1653. His grandfather, Lieut. Richard Whitaker, was an officer in the War of the Revolution. His mother was a direct descendant of Roger Williams.

Saddest Services At
Grave of Unidentified
Every Memorial Day the saddest part of the devotion-paying to the memory of the patriotic dead is that at the Tomb of the Unknown in Arlington National Cemetery.

Here, as the inscription states, are buried the bodies of 2,111 Union soldiers whose names are forever lost, whose surviving relatives know only that they went to war and were never heard of again. Their fate is revered above that of the known dead by their living comrades, but only in a general and abstract sense. They are the unknown, those who not only gave their lives, but their identities for the sake of the Government.

Besides these 2,111, whose bodies lie in the Tomb of the Unknown gathered from the battlefield of Bull Run and the route of the Gettysburg campaign, are 2,489 other unidentified bodies of Union veterans in Arlington, their bodies lying in the vault.

Arlington shelters the earthly remains of 33,417 men who fought for their country.

GEN. WHITAKER HERO OF MANY BATTLES

Soldier Now at Fort Stevens
Helped Repulse the Attack
Made on Washington.

Visitors to Fort Stevens today were received by Gen. E. W. Whitaker, hero of eighty-two battles, who has a record of gallantry which caused his promotion from private in a Connecticut regiment to brigadier general. General Whitaker, now in the employ of the District government, is chairman of the reception committee of Gen. John A. Rawlins Post, G. A. R.

His assignment to Fort Stevens was peculiarly appropriate in view of the fact that it was there he aided in the repulse of the attack made on Washington by General Early on July 11 and 12, 1864. General Whitaker, who then was a captain, was sent from Grant's headquarters below Richmond to Washington to be examined for a promotion to a colonelcy. He started on the journey with a light heart, joyful in the anticipation of seeing his sweetheart, who was a resident of this city. As he was registering at the old National Hotel he was approached by an officer with the news that the Confederate forces under General Early were preparing for an attack on the Capital. He at once reported to the commanding officers at Fort Stevens and took a gallant part in the repulse of Early's memorable attempt to capture Washington.

Besides these 2,111, whose bodies lie in the Tomb of the Unknown gathered from the battlefield of Bull Run and the route of the Gettysburg campaign, are 2,489 other unidentified bodies of Union veterans in Arlington, their bodies lying in the vault.

Flowers Placed Upon
Irish Patriots' Graves
Graves of fifty Irish patriots who distinguished themselves in the service of this country were decorated in Mt. Olivet Cemetery this afternoon by the United Irish Societies of Washington under the auspices of the Irish-American Union. After the flowers had been distributed the members of the union gathered at the grave of Dr. Thomas Nevin Reilly, who fought in the Mexican war under General Jackson.

Standing before the headstone of the veteran of sixty-five years ago, Senator Henry F. Ashurst of Arizona delivered a brief address on the patriotism the Irish have always displayed when this country needed them. A choir of fifty voices from the ladies auxiliary of the Ancient Order of Hibernians sang several numbers.

HONOR MEMORY OF SPANISH WAR DEAD

Commander Costello and Three Congressmen Speakers At Arlington Cemetery.

Services in the Spanish-American war section of Arlington Cemetery began at 12:30 o'clock today, the opening address being made by Commander Jere A. Costello, of the Department of the District of Columbia. Other speakers were Congressmen T. U. Blanton of Mississippi; Nicholas J. Stennett, of Oregon, and Frank Clark, of Florida, and Samuel De Nedrey, of the Central Labor Union in this city. Chaplain G. Livingston Bayard, U. S. N., invoked the blessing, and music was provided by the Fort Meyer Band.

It remained for the war with Spain to give us of the South the opportunity to demonstrate beyond question that we were loyal to the old flag," said Congressman Clark, whose heart was the indissolubility of the Union. "When the torch of war with Spain was kindled, the very flower of the South responded to the call for the defense of 'Old Glory,' thus demonstrating to the world that we were reunited as one nation under one flag."

War Sometimes Necessary.
Peace at any cost was deemed a poor motto by Mr. De Nedrey, who insisted that war sometimes was necessary. "A terrible thing is war," he said, "but I have no sympathy with those who believe that we should be avoided at the sacrifice of national honor, at the expense of humanity, or the loss of liberty. I do not love those who turn deaf ears to the cries of the victims of tyranny, inhumanity and barbarity. Because liberty is ours and we must have it, even to the shedding of blood to secure it."

Honor District's Dead.
Gen. M. Emmet Urell Camp, assisted by Harden Camp, held special services in the morning at the grave of General Urell, for whom the former camp was named. Members of Harden Camp also held a service at the grave of Lieut. Richard J. Harden.

The Ladies Auxiliaries of the various camps served luncheon during the afternoon to the veterans and their families and friends.

Under direction of Congressman Oyer of Missouri, the Company C Veterans' Association decorated the graves of the men of the District of Columbia, who served in the Spanish war. Among the graves of the District of Columbia, who served in the Spanish war, was that of the Senator from Indiana, who died after his return from Cuba.
